In a dream this night there was a group of us exploring in an area close to a river. Approaching the river, we saw it was rising. I encouraged the group to go with me to a point on the river bank that protruded out into the river. Once out on the point I saw that it was much narrower than the last time I was there. As we turned to get off of the point it collapsed falling into the river. I and one of the others fell into the raging river. In the water I called to the other ahead of me not to fight the current but to flow with the current. I told him to hold out his hand in front of himself for protection. I flowed with the river current encompassed in an air bubble just beneath the surface of the water. Later I and the other were released from the river upon a swampy land. We called out to each other until united. The area looked like the land along the river on my grandpa's land after a flood. We began to search for his barn.

I sought the Lord for the interpretation. "As the rivers of my judgments begin to raise, those who will serve me will be in those rivers. Their only safety will be their trust and faith in me allowing me to place them where I want them to be. Those who stand on the banks of the rivers only wanting to get their ankles wet will serve me not."

In a vision I saw a man chewing his food. Then he spit the food out of his mouth unto the table. The Lord spoke—"In judgments when my truth is spoken many will not accept the truth. As their ears hear and their eyes see they will reject the truth in their minds and spirit. They will repent not."
