December 13, 2003

The dream this night was about a building being remodeled. The building was several stories in height made out of pipe for framing and tin for siding. The inside was not finished. It was partitioned off into offices without ceilings. The remodeling consisted of welders framing up and adding second story offices inside the building above the first floor. The ground floor space was to be vacated up completion of the job. Then I was outside looking at the guyed pole that was hinged so the pole could be laid down. The pole was in the horizontal when I first saw it. Its length in the horizontal position stretched over several city blocks. The pole was motorized for allowing the change of positions. I thought to myself how are they going to raise the tower from the horizontal position to vertical will all of those guy wires on the tower tangled in the trees. The tower began to rise to the vertical position when the motor switched on. The first thing I saw come vertical was a stub pipe painted red. When it reached vertical it swayed back and forth finally coming to a stop. I never did see the pole erected to vertical in the dream. As the dream ended I was trying to help with securing a safety cable without success.

Here is the interpretation from the Lord. "As the harvest is completed for my church, the seed will climb up my mountain above the others that change not. They will raise a standard of my truth that will be seen by all like a banner on a pole."
