The Lord spoke this interpretation from a dream I had in the night.

“No matter how many meetings denominational churches have trying to resolve differences, if they will not put aside the old and leave their doors open so that the wind of the Holy Spirit can blow and move among them they will remain incompatible with each other. It doesn't matter how many miles they travel together as long as they remain attached to the old house of traditions and doctrines the head of that house will control them. They will not want to leave the old house but remain parked in the front yard lounging around contented with what they have. Even when they are showed the destination to where I want to take them and know they must go, they will be in no hurry. They will be drawn to the things of this world, knowing they should be walking the narrow path. On that day, it will be too late for them to meet with rejoicing the King of kings and the Lord of lords. They will fear knowing they sinned without repentance working iniquity.”

Brothers and sisters God loves us and continues to warn us. Jesus is coming for his Church without spot or wrinkle. How much longer are we going to be band-aid Christians held together by denominations instead of the Holy Spirit? When are we going to become the new man in Christ? Are we going to do that before or during the judgment of God? What is your choice?

I share what the Lord spoke January 14, 2003 as I lay in bed waiting for sleep. “The hour is two minutes to midnight. The stem on the stop watch has been pushed. The second hand is moving. The clock will strike the hour of judgment in the months of this year. Blood will be let and funeral wails will be heard. My truths will be spoken. What's to be will be the opposite of what was.” Amen
